Weinbereitung

The 2020 growing season in Franciacorta began with mild winter weather that prompted normal budbreak during the first two weeks of April. Flowering took place during the second half of May under mild climatic conditions. June brought lower-than-average temperatures and generous rainfall while July was dry and breezy, ideal conditions for optimal veraison and ripening phases. Excellent temperature swings between day and night allowed the grapes to develop rich aromas and bright acidity, ideal for producing fine sparkling wine. The grape harvest for Donna Cora began mid-August.
